

Bilateral policy

Nedap has a two-tier board structure

In smaller companies like Nedap, management is more in touch with daily operations, and so lines of control are less formal and more direct. Management tasks are also less complex due to their nature and smaller scope. This means that a less rigorous allocation of duties is required. Moreover, the supervisory boards of smaller companies tend to be more involved in the company and consequently have a better understanding of what is happening at the company. This, too, obviously improves the quality of supervision in general.

Policy for bilateral contacts with shareholders

Nedap is committed to maintaining good relations with its shareholders. For this reason, in addition to the general meeting of shareholders, Nedap also maintains bilateral contact with shareholders. Both the company and the shareholders may initiate talks, which are intended to provide a more complete picture of developments at Nedap. Such talks are always based on information that has already been published. In talks with shareholders, the company is represented by a member of the Board of Directors.